HONGKONG, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7, 1905.

ELECTRICAL SHANGHAI.

For several years, Shanghai has been looking forward to the construction of a tramway through the Settlements, and while nobody suggested that the idea was not an excellent one, there was some under-current of opinion which effectually thwarted the efforts of the promoters. But, latterly, considerable progress had been made in the matter, and the offer of an Edinburgh firm of engineers to construct the tramway system, provided the concession was conferred on them, came before the Municipal Council. The tenderers stated that they would construct, equip and work an electric tramway system at an estimated initial outlay of £300,000. The credentials of the firm being satisfactory, and upon their representative complying with all the Council's requirements, the offer was on the point of being accepted. Just then, however, an agitation was raised on the subject of the Municipal Electrical Department's works. It was argued that in consequence of the mismanagement which had taken place in connection with the works—and for other reasons, no doubt—the Municipal Council should, in the words of the resolution eventually submitted to the ratepayers: "dispose of the Municipal Electricity Department's business and undertaking, together with the land, buildings, plant, machinery, and effects appertaining thereto, in conjunction with the granting of a concession for the construction and working of tramways in Shanghai." Forthwith arose a host of gladiators in favour of municipal enterprise and municipal trading generally. The Shanghai newspapers were crammed with "letters from our correspondents" on the subject. All the arguments that were ever heard pro and con municipal trading were once more exhibited to an admiring world. The example of Glasgow—that hôte noir of the upholders of private enterprise—was dragged forth and whirled before the faces of those who favoured the sale of the electric department. Eten ministers of religion left the peaceful sanctity of their study to join in the fray, and apparently everybody in Shanghai—with the exception of a few who are interested in their business affairs—had a finger in the pie. It was the all-absorbing topic, and that fact explains, perhaps, the comparative apathy of the northern Settlement over the arrival of battered Russian cruisers, and the temporary absence of what are familiarly known as "bundlers." An offer of a million and quarter taels was made for the electrical plant, etc., and the comparative magnitude of that sum blinded many to the advantages, on general principles, of public works being carried out by and under the supervision of the public—that is to say, the Municipality. At any rate, when the Municipal Council was just on the point of granting the tramway concession to the Edinburgh people, along came the intimation that this meeting on the subject of the Electrical Department was to be convened. The Council accordingly decided to wait a bit and watch developments. It was a decidedly weak and pusillanimous proceeding on the part of the Council, but it is not unprecedented. No sooner was the scheme to sell the Department mooted than people began to realise that after all the Department had not discharged its duties so very badly. It was admitted that it had not kept pace with the growing requirement of the Settlement, but a slight expenditure would soon remedy that. But it was the offer of a million and a quarter taels that proved the most insidious bait. And the supporters of municipal trading set to work to clear the minds of the "others." "The offer of 14 million taels for the department," said one newspaper "looks a very liberal one, seeing that the book value is only half the amount. But in the first place, the book value is far below its real value, and no one would offer 14 million taels for it if he did not think he could make a profit on that outlay." Then again: "Shanghai continues to grow so fast that while 14 million taels looks a large sum now, it will look very much smaller five years hence; and we hold to the principle that the lighting of the Settlements should be a municipal, not a private undertaking." Meanwhile the firm whose offer to construct a tramway had been for all practical purposes passed, were left to await the result of the meeting of electors. The result of that meeting is told in a special telegram from Shanghai to-day. The electors have determined to sell their undertaking by the overwhelming majority of 600 to 5. So the eloquent divines and the sober-sided citizens who fought against the proposal have been hopelessly outmatched. Well, the electric plant will be sold and now arises the question—Will the holders of the tramway concession have an opportunity of bidding for the plant, etc., or will it go to the party who offered one and a quarter millions for it? Again, supposing the concessionaries decline to purchase the plant or fail to bid highest, will they be placed at the beck and call of the new owners? who may refuse to give the power necessary to drive the cars. It would seem, indeed, that Shanghai residents have discovered a real live subject for discussion, one that is likely to last for some time to come. Shanghai is supposed to be a lively place at any time; it is on a far way to break its own "record." But it will have to wait for its tramway.

THE INDO-CHINA S. N. CO.

With reference to the letter from a correspondent, who signs himself "Shareholder," appearing in another column, we understand that an influential body of shareholders in Hongkong have decided to cable the directors of the Indo-China Steam Navigation Co. in London expressing the dissatisfaction of a very large body of shareholders in Hongkong in the matter of the proposed distribution of the earnings of the Company for the past year. We also understand that a telegraphic message was despatched to Shanghai late this afternoon notifying the shareholders in the Indo-China Steam Navigation Co. of the movement in Hongkong, and it is believed that their co-operation will be voluntarily enlisted in the protest to London.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

The Chinese have been celebrating the Dragon Festival to-day.

By the addition of two fatal cases to-day, the plague record for the year numbers 125 cases to date.

MR. E. D. C. Wolfe, Transvaal Emigration Agent for Shanghai, left Chefoo towards the close of last month, for Chinghai and is expected to be absent until about the 10th inst.

The Indian cook who was so badly burned under circumstances already recorded by us, at Arenal street, has succumbed to his injuries at the Government Civil Hospital.

Messrs. Miscellany, for the week ending the 30th ult., contains another lengthy instalment of the interesting account of the life and adventures of a British pioneer in China in addition to much other useful information; always ensured to readers of this popular Shanghai journal.

ACCORDING to "Garrison Orders," commencing on Thursday next and until further orders there will be a fortnightly issue of biscuit to the troops in Garrison. We are told that they will not be issued to married families. On the 14th inst. and until further orders preserved meat will be issued fortnightly.

CHENG WING, an emaciated looking youth was charged with burglary and stealing clothing, and a pillow box containing two promissory notes, one for $70 and one for $30 the property of a woman at Yau-mai on the 5th inst. Mr. F. A. Hazeland sentenced him to four months' hard labour and six hours in the stocks.

JOHN WYLLIE, the man of many convictions, whose last escapade was visiting houses in Kowloon, and by representing to be a Sanitary Inspector, obtaining money by false pretences, was placed before Mr. G. N. Orme this morning, when he stated that he had nothing to say, and his fifth sentence of six months' hard labour was recorded against him.

ALLEGED PERJURY.

CONRADORE COMMITTEE.

The hearing was resumed this afternoon, before Mr. F. A. Hazeland, of the case in which She Tat Tsoi, conradore of the Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamboat Company, is charged with perjury, under circumstances already recorded by us.

Mr. H. N. Ferrers, instructed by Mr. O. D. Thomson, prosecuted, and Mr. Dixon appeared for the defence.

Li Hung Mi, assistant interpreter at the Supreme Court, remembered the case of Chu Hok Lung and the present defendant, and also an inquiry taking place in April and May before the Registrar of the Supreme Court, at which he acted as interpreter. Defendant gave evidence in the Cantonese dialect, and a witness would swear that he correctly interpreted the questions put to defendant, and also his answers.

To Cheung Wa, sergeant interpreter, at the central station, testified to a statement made by accused when charged.

Detective Sergeant O'Sullivan produced a warrant for the arrest of She Tat Tsoi, whom he took into custody on the 19th ult.

Mr. Dixon pointed out the important points held by defendant, and stated that his employers had such complete confidence in him that they were now actively interested themselves in his behalf. The terms of the agreement between defendant and his surety were that, if there were any profits from the conradoreship, the surety was to draw $48 per month. Mr. Dixon said that defendant had stated that the surety did not draw his $48 for two years because there were no profits, and two years later the agreement was re-made upon the old terms. This charge was of the flimsiest character, and was brought maliciously, and he would ask his Worship to discharge defendant, and to say that he left the Court without a stain on his character, since he was convinced that no crime had been committed, and no jury would convict.

Mr. Ferrers said the case was a clear one as they had it in evidence that on the 17th of April defendant said he did not consult plaintiff regarding the payments of the $125 and $48 respectively, and on the 16th of May he said he did tell the plaintiff about the arrangement and the plaintiff agreed. Those contradictory statements made in the course of official examination constituted perjury, and that being so he must ask his Worship to do his duty and send defendant for trial by a jury.

His Worship said he was satisfied a prima facie case had been made out against defendant, and therefore the only course open to him was to commit him to take his trial at the Criminal Sessions. This he did, and adjourned the case to the 10th inst.

CONRADORES AND THEIR SURETIES.

INTERESTING NOTIONS IN COURT.

Sitting in Original Jurisdiction at the Supreme Court this morning, the Chief Justice (Mr. F. T. Pigott) heard applications of some considerable interest to mercantile firms in Hongkong. The question arose in connection with an undertaking given by Ma Kiu Ting, who figured as the plaintiff of a conradore formerly in the employ of Messrs. Lutgens, Einmann and Co., who appeared in Court as the defendants.

Mr. H. G. Callthrop (instructed by Mr. F. X. d'Almeida e Castro) was present on behalf of the plaintiff, and Mr. H. E. Pollock, K.C. (instructed by Mr. H. Hursthouse, of Messrs. Delnys and Bowley) represented the defendant firm.

Counsel for Messrs. Lutgens, Einmann and Co. opened the case, and explained to his Lordship that he could move that the report of the referee in this matter, which was filed on the 26th May last, might be carried into effect, and that the plaintiff might be ordered to pay to the defendants the sum of $7,000 and costs of the action; also that the remuneration of the referee might be fixed by the Court, and that the amount in Court to the credit of the action be paid to the defendant's solicitors. The application was made under sub-section 8, of section 553 of the Hongkong Code, and also under section 557, the latter section of which stipulates that the Court has to determine the remuneration to be paid to any special referee ordered. The matter in dispute was referred to Mr. A. R. Lowe, chartered accountant, and Mr. Pollock submitted that a reasonable remuneration should be paid to him for his services. Before dealing with the question of the actual report made by the referee, Counsel thought it would be convenient to furnish his Lordship with a few details of the case. The writ of summons, he said, was taken out by the plaintiff on the 12th August, 1903. This man was surety for the conradore employed by the defendant, and as his Lordship was in all probability unacquainted with the term "conradore" Mr. Pollock proceeded to explain in what capacity these people were employed. A conradore, he said, was a trusted employee of a firm who engaged him to act, in effect, as an intermediary between the firm and their Chinese customers. He really secured to the firm that their native customers would carry out their contracts, and guaranteed that any contracts entered into between the firm and the Chinese customers would be duly carried out. In the present case the conradore was paid a salary and also received commission. It was customary for the conradore holding such a responsible position to put up some security of his own for the due and faithful performance of his duties, and also to find some person to put up security for him that he would carry out his agreement in a proper manner. The plaintiff in the case in point was the guarantor for the conradore of the defendant firm, a man named Ng Lai Kok. He undertook to perform such duties as are ordinarily performed by conradores in Hongkong, and agreed to guarantee and be personally answerable for and pay and make good the price of all goods delivered by him or any of his Chinese assistants either in Hongkong or Canton, and also make good all losses and damages, etc. The plaintiff contracted to be responsible in a total sum of $15,000 to the defendants in respect of the default of the conradore under his agreement. Upon being engaged the conradore had to deposit $8,000, and the defendants now proposed to appropriate that sum in pursuance of the referee's report. Mr. Lowe found that the sum of $10,000 odd was due by the conradore to Messrs. Lutgens, Einmann & Co., and consequently to the extent of the surety's liability they had the $8,000 in hand, and were now asking that plaintiff be ordered to pay them the $7,000, the balance of his liability. The referee's remuneration had been agreed at $12.50, and this amount would, of course, be paid as general costs by the unsuccessful party in the present action. Having explained generally the nature of the conradore's agreement with the defendant firm and the surety's position, Counsel proceeded to explain the precise nature of the proceedings in the case. The writ of summons was issued by the plaintiff as surety on the 12th August, 1903, and he claimed to have an account taken of the dealings and transactions of the conradore. It was no doubt considered advisable that it should be referred to an accountant, and a summons was taken out accordingly on behalf of the plaintiff. This was dated the 23rd October, 1903, and was consented to on behalf of the defendants on the understanding that upon an account being taken by Mr. Lowe the surety should pay up to $15,000 what the referee found to be due. Mr. Lowe went into the matter thoroughly and there were numerous sittings before him. In the end he found there was due and owing the sum of $10,979.50 and that the plaintiff as surety was liable to pay to the defendants the $15,000 less the $5,000 already paid, or held by the defendant firm.

Mr. Callthrop explained that the conradore guaranteed that the firm's customers would pay for what they had; if they did not do so the defendants could sue him, and if he did not pay then they could come down on the plaintiff as surety. It appeared, however, that there were a very large number of contracts, dating as far back as 1890, and he asked that the matters in the terms under which those contracts were made, the dates they ought to have been performed, and when the liabilities were incurred. He pointed out to his Lordship that he was making a motion for the matter to be referred back, and stated that if the plaintiff had been informed at once when the debts became due the claim could not have been resisted. As it was they knew nothing whatever about the debts until long after they had been contracted. He asked that Mr. A. R. Lowe be instructed to go into the matter again, and report with regard to the plaintiff's present estate to what extent the plaintiff has been pre-empted by the neglect of the defendants in not enforcing the contracts according to their terms, and in not giving notice to the plaintiff at the time the debts were contracted.

His Lordship eventually adjourned the case.

THE INDO-CHINA S. N. CO.

To the Editor of the "Hongkong Telegraph." Sir,—The report of the directors of the Indo-China Steam Navigation Company for the past year must have come pretty much as a shock to the majority of shareholders in Hongkong, particularly when a reference was made to the dividend which it is proposed to give. There is a general impression that the distribution proposed is utterly disproportionate to the enormous amount of profits made by the Company during the past year. It is no exaggeration to say that the decision of the general managers in appropriating not a quarter of the profits towards dividends is regarded with the utmost dissatisfaction by the very large body of shareholders in China. In fact, so great has been the disappointment that within 48 hours after the announcement of the dividend the stock depreciated by over 20 per cent. The fall in the market value of the stock was $23 between Friday and Monday, although it recovered but slightly yesterday, thanks to one firm of brokers who were instrumental in making known through your columns the detailed figures held back by the general managers. The drop in the market value of the shares is simply staggering. No great slump one could understand if there was some radical difficulty either with the management or of a ship or some material reduction in the position attained by the Company with regard to the South and North China trade, particularly emigration traffic from China to the Straits and back and the opium traffic from India to China. But none of these contingencies has arisen so far as the Indo-China Steam Navigation Company is concerned at the present moment. Nor as far as human knowledge can see is any of them likely to arise so long as the Company continue to trade within the limits which they have set down for themselves ever since the formation.

In 1903 the Company upon an exceptionally smaller amount than that earned last year, £38,017-12-3 to be exact—did not think it wrong to appropriate from the underwriting account a sum equal to about twice as much as that year's profit, namely £65,391-7-2, sufficient to enable them to distribute a dividend of 10 per cent. It was subsequently stated at the meeting in London, in reply to a question put by Dr. Divers, that in connection with the underwriting account, "outside cover had been provided which was an absolute protection against the risk which was covered. Consequently the risk was very greatly diminished. In the event of a loss instead of having a greater they would have a reduced loss." It was an arrangement that was a little complex, but it was one that was absolutely to the advantage of the company.

In 1903, the company, to quote the chairman's own words, "had not earned from the absolute it came from the steamers a sufficient sum fully to cover the depreciation, and therefore the sum taken from the underwriting account was availed of to meet the difference in losses to pay the dividend." The directors in their report in 1903 for the year 1902 referred to the depressed condition of the shipping trade in the Far East and said: "Owing to these causes a dividend would hardly have been looked for, but the absence of any total loss or of serious damage to the fleet for a long period has allowed of the accumulation of profit on the underwriting account, which nearly equals half the paid-up capital of the Company, and the directors consider this account has reached such dimensions that they are justified in the interests of the shareholders in transferring £85,516-9-0 to the reserve fund, leaving still the large sum of £240,000 at credit of underwriting account." This year, when the profit as shown by the statement which was published from Messrs. Benjamin, Kelly & Potts yesterday amounts to over £157,000, the dividend proposed is only 6 per cent, or 2½ per cent better than in the year when the company actually incurred a loss, and when to suit the general managers a dividend of five per cent was declared. There is only a difference of one per cent. between the fat year that has passed and the lean year that preceded it.

One item of your report stated that £35,000 would be placed to the underwriting account in addition to the provision of £65,000 for depreciation and a round £20,000 to the general reserve fund. From the chairman's statement made last year, one would infer that the complex system of re-insurance entered into since 1903 should not have rendered necessary the provision of any very large sum in the way of provision towards the company's risks on its own boats, and very greatly diminished. Yet we have an appropriation of £35,000 contemplated towards that amount when the dividend is reduced to a minimum.

What was the necessity for this disproportionate distribution of the profits? I have heard it said on all hands that the holding back of the figures of the proposed appropriation by the general managers when dividend was declared on Friday last was an exceedingly unsatisfactory—and by many held to be an unfair—concealment of the exact position of the Company. The result has been that quite a panic occurred on the local stock exchange and in Shanghai towards the end of last and the beginning of this week.

Regarding the present position of the Company it is safely asserted—and I turn to the official statement of the directors—that the Company's fleet was never in a better condition than it is at the present moment. Old boats have been sold out of the fleet, and have been replaced by several new and up-to-date steamers, answering to the exact requirements of the Company's business in the East. From present indications there is nothing to fear that, equipped as the Company is with a fleet of modern boats of suitable build, tonnage and speed, any competition would wrest from the company the business which it can control by virtue of the facilities it has enjoyed under the general management of a firm, who have, at their command, numerous outlets in various branches of trade, which will ensure for the Company's boats a tonnage splendid concern, a profit, and make it the splendid concern, which it is generally regarded as being.

Why is it, again, that in London the shares actually stand at 1½ sterling, with no depreciation, and yet in Hongkong and Shanghai directly the dividend was announced the big slump of 20 per cent. occurred within 48 hours? There are some of the questions which I, along with other shareholders, would like to hear answered. I am, etc.

The vote to decide whether the Shanghai Municipality should dispose of the Municipal Electricity Department's business, in connection with the granting of an electric tramways concession, was taken yesterday. The vote resulted as follows: For 600; Against 5.

[The above telegram refers to a special meeting of Shanghai ratepayers which was held in the Shanghai Town Hall yesterday, to discuss and pass resolutions authorising the Council to dispose of the Municipal Electricity Department's business and undertaking, together with the land, buildings, plant, machinery, and effects appertaining thereto, in conjunction with the granting of a concession for the construction and working of Tramways in Shanghai.—Ed., H.K.T.]

THE CRUISER "SULLY."

We hear to-day, from the French Consul, that no news of any importance has been received from those on the Sully. Everything is in statu quo, on account of the bad weather prevailing, and this has enforced a cessation of work, and the salvage party are now remaining on the qui vive for a possible less calm day, until the advent of which nothing can be done. Some anxiety is naturally felt for the chances of the ultimate salvage of the Sully, as the approach of the S. W. monsoon is rendering the task more difficult and even dangerous.

THE INFRINGEMENT OF TRADE-MARKS.

ACTION AGAINST OSAKA DEALERS.

Mr. Mori, a barrister of Osaka, on behalf of Mr. T. M. Little, Manager of Holzapfel's Composition Company of Newcastle-on-Tyne, has laid a complaint in the Osaka Chiba Sabansho against Kishigami, a print dealer, in Shim-machi, Osaka, and Taniyaga, a merchant in Matsubara, Osaka, charging them with an infringement of the trade-mark of the complainant's company. On Tuesday, Procurator Fukuda searched the houses of the defendants for the purpose of obtaining evidence.

According to the information given by the complainant to the Court, the trade-mark of the company was registered in Japan on July 23rd, 1897. Lately the defendants were found selling their paint packed in tins used by the complainant's company, with label, &c. complete, and passing off the article as the English composition.—Japan Chronicle.

DESTROYER STEAMS TO SHANGHAI.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Shanghai, 6th June,
5.15 p.m.

A Japanese torpedo-boat destroyer steamed up as far as the Public Garden this afternoon, while the regatta was in progress and attracted considerable attention.

She did not stop, but when off the Bund turned about and went in the direction of the sea to rejoin Admiral Uriu's squadron outside.

It is believed that the presence of the destroyer was intended to impress the Chinese authorities with a fitting sense of their neutrality obligations.

The Prospects of Peace.

LONDON, 5th June.

The Italian Minister in Washington, after a prolonged conference with Count Cassini on Saturday, conferred with President Roosevelt and M. Takahira was then summoned from New York; a prolonged interview then took place with Roosevelt. M. Takahira stated afterwards that there could be no progress until St. Petersburg was heard from. According to the Standard, the American Ambassador in St. Petersburg reports that this is not likely to be for a fortnight, till the present excitement has subsided; but, with reserve, he opines that prospects are hopeful.

On Saturday night the Channel Squadron struck a dense fog off Dover; the Ceres collided with the merchant ship Affghanistan, which sank with the loss of 18 hands. The Triumph collided with the Swiftsure, the latter being badly damaged; the Triumph and the Ceres were only slightly damaged.

SHIPPING JETSAW.

Mr. Robert Dollar, who is now in Europe, says the London Shipping Gazette has ordered from Messrs. A. Rogers & Co. of Glasgow another large steamer for the Pacific trade. He has recently taken over the Head Dollar and the new vessel will be a duplicate.

It is reported that in the near future the steamers of the Northern Pacific Steamship Co. plying in the trade between the Sound and the Orient will call at San Francisco on the return trip from the Orient. The company is now operating the steamers Albatross, Shawmut, Tremont, Pleasant, Hyades, and Lyra, and will have the Dakota in Pacific waters this summer.

"BRUTAL AND COWARDLY" SEAMEN.

Will Grant, C. Laflotte, and Carl Patterson, three seamen from the s.s. Decatur, were charged with assaulting Edward Large, the second officer of that vessel, on board on the 6th inst. It was alleged that the trouble arose over the bending of a nail while it was rising. The chief officer stated that the first defendant came up to him and asked if he wanted a fight, as if so he would give it him. The second defendant struck him in the back, and then held him up against the rail while he continued striking him, and the third defendant also kept striking him. Some one kicked him from behind, but he did not know if it was the third defendant. The third defendant, a Swede, could not understand English and the case was adjourned for half an hour to admit of the services of an interpreter being procured. There was some difficulty about this until a Scandinavian sailor was discovered at the Sailors' Home, and he was duly sworn. The cook of the vessel gave similar evidence to that of the complainant, but said he did not see the third defendant do anything to complainant. Sergt. Pitt testified to the wounds sustained by the complainant, and said the left eye was nearly closed up, and there were cuts and bruises on the cheek and forehead. A witness for the defence said the second mate was the cause of the trouble; he "was always chasing the men around the decks, all the way from New York." Captain Gale said the second mate was a very young man and had only been promoted from apprentice this voyage. No complaints had ever been made to witness regarding the second mate's treatment of the men. He never heard the second mate use the bad language attributed to him. The first defendant had been logged for threatening the second mate with a knife.

"His Worship said that the assault committed by the first and second defendants was of a most brutal and cowardly character, and they must each go to one month's hard labour. There was no evidence against the third defendant and he was discharged.

THE HOUSE-TAX ARBITRATION.

TEXT OF THE AWARD.

The text of the award in the House-tax arbitration case delivered by The Hague Tribunal on the 22nd ult. has been received at the Foreign Office, Tokyo. The preamble to the reasons given for the award is as follows:—

"The Treaties and engagements referred to in the Arbitration Protocol relative to this Arbitration, signed between the parties on the 28th August, 1902, exempt not only the land held under lease in perpetuity granted by or on behalf of the Japanese Government, but also the buildings of whatever description, constructed or which may hereafter be constructed on such land, from any imposts, taxes, charges, contributions or conditions whatsoever, other than those expressly stipulated in the leases in question."

The following is a summary of the reasons given for this decision:—

In this case the Court has to decide the question whether or not the buildings constructed on the land held under perpetual lease are regarded as the complement of the land by mutual agreement between the parties and from the standpoint of the imposition of taxes. Such a question cannot be regarded as distinct from the ownership of real estate. It must therefore follow that no special explanation need be given respecting the contentions advanced by either of the parties based upon the rights set forth in the Civil Code. The land, the object in this case, was leased for the purpose of constructing buildings thereon within a certain limited area, with a penalty attached providing for a cancellation of any lease should the holder avoid the obligation of constructing a building thereon. It is expressly stipulated in many of the leases that in case the leaseholder commits a breach of certain conditions therein provided, the buildings on such land shall revert to the Japanese Government. These facts show the groundlessness of the contention that the land and the buildings thereon form entirely distinct objects between the parties to the lease. From the point of view of taxation, the Arbitral Tribunal finds that the Japanese Government, in granting leases in perpetuity, acted in two capacities—as the owner of the land and as the sovereign of the country. Therefore the will of the parties to the lease is law, and it is necessary to consider what kind of treatment leases in perpetuity have hitherto enjoyed in Japan in the matter of the imposition of taxes, in order to arrive at a right interpretation of the instrument. Considering the practice in vogue for years, the Tribunal finds that the buildings on the land have been exempt from any imposts, taxes, charges, or contributions, other than those expressly stipulated in the leases. The Japanese Government maintained that this immunity from all imposts was the practical result of the existence of consular jurisdiction; but they not only failed to produce any established evidence to prove this contention, but it is clear they retained no right whatever against the Governments of the three countries in regard to the imposition of taxes during the time of the old Treaties. The Japanese Government further maintained that during the period covered by the old Treaties foreigners generally enjoyed immunity from taxation, but on coming to consider the case of certain holders of real estate at Hyogo [the lots on the Hill at Kobe leased to foreigners by the Government] it appears that the immunity was not enjoyed absolutely. In making provisions for the abolition of the old Settlement system, the Treaty countries which are the parties to this arbitration not only stipulated for the confirmation of the leases in perpetuity, but added a provision that "no conditions whatsoever other than those contained in such existing leases shall be imposed in respect of such property." The wording of the supplementary condition is most clear in the French Treaty, which runs:—"Lorsque les chanceries cédantes indiquent avoir été effectués, les hauts et puissants seigneurs desquels les étrangers possèdent actuellement des propriétés dans les quatre dix-sept ans de la cession, les propriétés de cette nature ne donneront lieu à aucuns imposts, taxes, charges, contributions ou conditions quelconques autres que ceux expressément stipulés dans les baux en question." Moreover, if the Treaty Powers had intended such immunity from taxation to apply to the land only it is clear that the word "land" would have been distinctly used. On the contrary, they adopted a term ["property"] of wider signification and comprehensive of the conditions in their entirety created by the lease. The Arbitral Tribunal cannot admit that the Diplomatic Note in reference to the holders of leases in perpetuity attached to the Treaty between Japan and Germany in a position less advantageous than the other Treaty Powers. The Japanese Government advanced various arguments to the effect that the German Government owed to the Japanese law which denies the right of owning landed property to foreigners the exemption of the land in question from taxation; but the point to be considered now is that, from the point of view of the levying of taxes, the buildings on the land held under perpetual lease are in their nature practically complements of the land, and it is impossible to believe that the German Government intended when making a Treaty with Japan to relinquish the benefits granted by the Anglo-Japanese Treaty.

The award is signed by the three members of the Arbitral Tribunal, M. Gram, the Umpire; M. Regnault, the Arbitrator appointed on behalf of Great Britain, France, and Germany; and Mr. Motono, the Arbitrator appointed by Japan. Above the signature of Mr. Motono appears a formal dissent both from the preamble and the main text of the Award.

NAVAL NOTES.

H.M.S. Phigalia was expected to leave Singapore yesterday. She is conveying the six torpedo-boat destroyers which are coming to Hongkong.

H.M.S. Diadem is proceeding to Colombo to meet the Gotha and Canopus, and will embark 200 supernumeraries which these ships are bringing out for the China Squadron.

THE DESTROYERS.

All the Albatross class of destroyer—six in number—attached to the Atlantic Fleet, which are on their way to Hongkong are the Essex, the Ettrick, the Erin, the Die, the Ilchen, and the Arum. It is not long since these vessels, with all their spare parts of machinery, etc., were transferred from Malta to Gibraltar, and their despatch to China was quite unexpected. As soon as possible another division of the River class will be formed and sent to the Atlantic Fleet.

PLUCKY POLICE SERGEANT.

SAVES LIFE.

For the second time within but a short period Sergeant William Pitt, of the Hongkong Police Force, has the credit placed to his record of saving life in the waters of this harbour. It appears that on Monday last, as the s.s. Zoffra, from Manila, was entering the harbour at about half past two o'clock in the afternoon, a launch towing a sampan full of Chinamen proceeded towards the steamer. As they neared the Zoffra the people in the sampan wanted to get on to the launch and she accordingly dropped alongside to take them off. A rush was made by the men on the sampan, to get aboard the launch, during which one of them fell overboard, and immediately sank. The police pinnace, in charge of Sergeant Pitt, was in the vicinity, and without a moment's hesitation or stopping to divest himself of even his coat, the sergeant plunged in and swam to the rescue and managed to reach the man just as he was sinking for the second time. He held on to him while the steam launch Chi Lay, which was approaching, threw out a lifebuoy to his assistance. With the aid of this the man was kept afloat until he could be hoisted aboard a passing junk. It was then found that he was in an exhausted condition. In the meantime the other passengers on the sampan were panic-stricken and appeared unable to do anything beyond shouting "Save life" and "Man overboard." It was not found necessary to treat the man in any way. As soon as he found himself in safety he quickly recovered and was profuse in his expressions of gratitude to the sergeant, admitting that but for his timely assistance he must inevitably have been drowned. This rescue was witnessed by some of the Officers, Chief Engineer, and passengers of s.s. Zoffra. On the last occasion on which Sergeant Pitt saved a man's life in the harbour he was rewarded by the Government of Hongkong, but it would seem that this time he which the Royal Humane Society might inquire into, in addition to anything the local authorities might see fit to do in the matter.

NAVAL LESSONS OF THE WAR.

WAR.

ADMIRAL SIR CYPRIAN BRIDGE'S CONCLUSIONS.

Admiral Sir Cyprian Bridge contributes an interesting chapter to the Naval Annual for 1905, under the heading, "The Russo-Japanese Naval Campaign of 1904." In the course of it, he claims that the battleship as a type has eminently justified her existence in the campaign. "It was Togo's battle fleet, not his torpedo-craft, not the sunken steamers, not the Japanese blockade mines, which really confounded the Russians to Port Arthur." Some difference of opinion may possibly be expressed on the view that speed has small tactical and strategic value. Sir Cyprian Bridge says that people who expected to find in the operations of the campaign any proof of the value of a superiority of speed will be disappointed. That no great value as a factor in general tactics could be assigned to speed superiority has long been suspected by officers who had made a study of tactical questions. In the domain of strategy, as distinguished from tactics, the value of higher speed than an adversary's was thought likely to be considerable. Summing up his conclusions, he says:—

"We see now that many things which will neutralise speed are likely to happen. What we ought to do is to remember that it is only one of the various elements of fighting efficiency. A ship of war is intended primarily to fight and not to run away. In ships for general fighting actions—that is, ships for fighting in combination with consorts—the elements of offensive power in any individual should bear the proper relation to the aggregate of that power in the whole group. For certain classes of vessels, which usually will be of small size, very high speed, greater than that of an antagonist if possible, should be provided; but it must be clearly understood that these vessels can only play a very special and restricted part in war."

With reference to cruisers, it is claimed that a true conception of cruiser tactics indicates that multiplicity rather than a small number of powerful individual ships, should be needed, and that the campaign suggests a question as to the utility of big armoured cruisers. Of the ram, Sir Cyprian remarks that it is significant that not only was no attempt made by either the Russians or Japanese to use the ram in action, but also attack with the ram was never mentioned in connection with any engagement in the campaign, or even seriously thought of. "It will be interesting to see how long the ram bow will continue to be a feature of the warship design."

MISSING.

THE STRANGE CASE OF THE "CLAUDELORE."

A peculiar, and, perhaps, unique point in marine insurance practice has arisen in regard to the fate of the hopelessly overdue steamer Claude Lore, which sailed from Hongkong on November 23rd last, bound for Vladivostok, and which has not since been heard. That she has been lost is assumed alike by her owners and the underwriters concerned, but as there exists a doubt as to the cause of her loss she has not yet been officially posted at Lloyd's as "missing."

The system which prevails at Lloyd's in regard to posting vessels as "missing" is not well-known to the general public. When a ship is so long overdue that all hope for her safety has been abandoned, it is the practice to post her on a Wednesday at midday "for inquiry." A piloted ship, setting forth the voyage of the overdue vessel, is affixed to a board in what has been described as the "Chamber of Horrors." It is in this room, which looks out on Threadneedle Street, that the arrivals, sailings, speakings, and maritime casualties received by post or cable from the four corners of the world are posted, and here also are posted ships which have put to sea and vanished.

When a vessel is posted "for inquiry" it is fairly safe to assume that, as sailors express it, she has "made a hole in the water." If no news of her is received on the following Wednesday she is finally posted as "missing," the marine insurance claims are settled, and the words "missing from (such and such a date)" are printed against her name in Lloyd's Register.

But this practice has to some extent been departed from in the case of the Claude Lore, for although she was posted "for inquiry" so long ago as March 1st, she has not yet been finally posted as "missing." If she were to end her career as a "missing ship" the loss would fall upon those underwriters who have subscribed their names to the ordinary marine policy; but she was bound to Vladivostok, and it is therefore not unreasonable to suggest that her loss may have been directly caused by the war, in which event the "war risk" underwriters would have to bear the burden of her loss. She has not been reported as "captured," nor is there any definite information regarding her; but the idea that she may have struck a floating mine is at least feasible. The probability is that if no further news is received within a short time she will go off the register as a "missing ship," the cause of her vanishing remaining an unfathomable mystery for all time.

The Claude Lore was built last year at Sunderland, and she met her doom on her maiden voyage. London was her port of registry, and on her last fateful voyage she was commanded by Captain E. E. Thomas. Her crew would probably number about thirty hands.
